WHY COMPRESSION GARMENTS

Minimize Swelling, Bruising, and Pain

Well-made surgical compression garments are designed to provide the perfect amount of pressure uniformly across your body. This keeps swelling in check and keeps discomfort to a minimum. Without the garment, swelling can be more severe, which leads to tense skin, irritated nerve fibers and damaged blood vessels. A compression garment helps minimize all of these things. It lets you recover quicker, and makes the whole process more comfortable.

Prevents Skin Dimpling

For about 4-6 weeks after surgery, your body will be working overtime to heal. Just as you form a scar to mend a cut on your finger, you also form scar tissue under your skin after you have surgery. Without a compression garment, your skin will be building scar tissue randomly, and that's how you wind up with dimples, wrinkles, and depressions in your skin. These irregularities are much less likely to happen if you wear your compression garment.

Smooth out Saggy Skin

The garment minimizes and smooths saggy skin. It's natural for skin to sag after the fat is removed. Without the right compression garment, skin doesn't heal in the right place. Proper compression helps shrink and contract so that it eventually looks like the fat was never there. The garment doesn't guarantee that all the skin will tighten up, but it helps improve consistency.

Wearing a high-quality compression garment is almost as important as the surgery itself. If you choose not to wear your garment, even the best plastic surgeon can't give you perfect results. Liposuction is all about the way things heal, not about the way the fat is removed. In many ways you actually play the most important role in how good your final result will be.

First Stage and Second Stage Garments

Stage One garments provide proper compression immediately following surgery and are to be worn as your doctor specifies. This zippered garment with hooks and eyes, and reinforced seams, allows for uniform radial compression and durability during the critical immediate post-operative period, and easy on and off removal.

Stage Two garments provide continued healing compression and support during the second stage of recovery (typically 2-8 weeks post-op). This non-zippered, pull-on garment is for additional support to the newly contoured body. Second stage garments also fit smoothly under clothing as patients become more active and keep zippers from making impressions in the skin.
